

Scenario: Free Software that Follows Propriety Software

In the situation of Bingo Software Company and Pete's Software Company, what Pete's software did is not unfair. They did not copy the source code of Bingo System and according to the programmers of Bingo, it seems that Pete's software was newly built, that is, form the ground up.

At the side of Bingo software, they think that Pete's software wronged their system because they are bankrupt after Pete's releases their software that has the same features and functionalities with their system and give it to the market freely. But for me, market is a conversation. The success and failure of the company depends on how they sell their products to their market. Depends on their strategy to talk and communicate their products to the market. And I think it is not the fault of Pete's software that Bingo software got bankrupt, Maybe Pete's software is more competitive than Bingo's software.
